RECOVERED EMAIL - COMPROMISED ACCOUNT

Pulled from the Sent folder after gaining access to the account - exported for the record

Origin

Investigators gained access to a personal email account believed to belong to the individual operating under the alias 'Dr. Rootkit' -- the hijacker of ICARUS and the ongoing threat to the KEEPER OF TOMORROW's mission. The message below was recovered from that account's Sent folder. Recipient could not be determined from this message alone.

Message body

"Novare isn't even terraformed yet and they're already hauling Kalium off-world like it's theirs to take. ICARUS found plenty before I ever set foot on her -- more than RazorPower ever logged. I don't need the whole shipment, just my cut. Once KOT is close enough to Novare's gravity well there's a window to skim what I need before anyone downstream notices the numbers don't add up. You know the timeline. Don't write me here again after this -- use the usual channel. - R"

Analyst note

Message confirms a deliberate plan to divert a portion of KOT's Kalium shipment, consistent with the sender's established motive. No recipient account or identity recovered from this message alone. The sender's own address on this account should still be considered live --recommend attempting further contact through it while access to the provider holds.